It was a clear, cold winter morning. The sunshine glinted on the crisp, white snow. The whole world sparkled.

Porky Pig and Petunia were gaily making snowballs when Bugs Bunny ran down the street.

"Hi, kids!" he yelled. "Watcha say we build a snow rabbit?"

"G-Good!" Porky agreed enthusiastically. "Let's build a B-B-B one!"

Next door to Porky's house was a vacant lot covered with a deep white blanket of unbroken snow. It was a perfect place to build a snow rabbit.

Porky, Bugs and Petunia worked and worked and finally he was completed. He was a very jaunty-looking creature, a head taller than Bugs. Petunia found two pieces of coal for his eyes. Porky discovered some bright red berries to make his nose. And Bugs stuck one of his own precious carrots in the opening that was the snow rabbit's mouth.

"G-Gosh! He s-sure looks R-R-R-A-I-I!" Porky stuttered admiringly.

"He's so elegant that he deserves a grand name," Petunia cried. "Let's call him Radenck!"

"If it don't thow, oie Rad'll stay here for days and days," Bugs said nodding.

That night the air grew colder. The next morning Radenck was a glittering ice rabbit.

All the neighborhood children were in the vacant lot, admiring Radenck when Peter Pigg rushed up to them bringing exciting news.

"Rogue Rabbit," the robber and night-wormer had escaped from the village jail. The sheriff had offered a reward for his capture and was organizing a manhunt to track him down.

"Gugina be easy to follow his footprints in this snow!" Bugs cried. "G-men! Let's get in on the hunt!"

Porky, Petunia and all the other children followed Bugs down the street. Eagerly they joined the crowd surging in front of the jail.

But the sheriff wouldn't let them join the groups of grim-faced hunters, setting out on the trail of Rogue Rabbit.

"You kids go home and stay there!" he ordered. "We don't want you to get hurt. Remember, this Rogue is a very dangerous character!"

Disappointed, Porky, Bugs and Petunia scuffed away through the snow.

"Let's go to your house and watch, Porky," Petunia suggested. "We can see a long way from your upstairs window."

So they went to Porky's house. From a second-story window they watched the five groups of armed men marching across the countryside, searching the snow-covered ground for the elusive

"LOOK!" Bugs Bunny cried suddenly, so suddenly that he choked on the carrot he was chewing. "Something's happened to Roderick!"

The eyes of Porky and Petunia followed his pointing finger and stared down at the snow rabbit in the vacant lot next door. The snow on the ground was trampled by the feet of the children, but back of Roderick there was a pile of loose snow which hadn't been there before.

"Somebody's inside Roderick!" Bugs guessed excitedly. "Somebody dug out the soft snow inside him and crammed in something!"

"Rogue Rabbit!" Porky and Petunia whispered in one excited breath.

"Shall we call the sheriff?" Petunia gasped.

"No!" Bugs said firmly. "If it ain't nothing except our imaginations, the whole town'll laugh at us. If it is your know-what, we'll capture him, ourselves, and be HEROES!"

"But how?" he asked. Petunia gasped. "The sheriff said he was dangerous, and he's got a gun!"

Bugs chewed his carrot and thought. "Got it!" he exclaimed finally. Then he talked quickly in a hissing whisper while Porky and Petunia listened.

"But that's awful dangerous," Petunia protested when Bugs finished.

"Are you a couple cowards?" Bugs jeered. "Have you forgotten about the reward? Do you want to be heroes, or don't you? Do you want to do your duty as citizens by capturing a dangerous criminal, or are you free-lance? Make up your minds... quick!"

"Okay. W-We'll d-do it!" Porky agreed in a weak voice and Petunia nodded.

A few minutes later they left the house and moved toward the vacant lot. Porky and Petunia were sitting on Bugs's sled and under them was a coil of string, clothesline. Bugs was pulling as he pushed the sled across the flat crust of the snow.

"Now!" came the big shove and the sled disappeared into the lot. Bugs was

"Okay!" Porky and Petunia shouted in answer. Their voices were loud and firm, but inside, they were trembling with excited fear.

Bugs pushed. The sled skinned across the lot, some heading straight for Roderick.

"PL-OSS!" Porky, Petunia and the sled crashed into Roderick. And in the same thing that wasn't ice or snow, something that yelled in a hoarse grunt of surprised pain. Snow, ice, Porky, Petunia, the sled and the "something else" smashed into a muddled heap.

The next minute Bugs leaped on the something that was struggling out from under the heap. That something was a lean and lanky rabbit with a cruel face.

"Jump on him!" Bugs ordered.

A moment later Rogue Rabbit was lying flat on the ground. Porky and Petunia were sitting on him while Bugs was busily tying him with the clothesline.

A short time later Porky, Petunia and Bugs led their bound captive down the street toward the jail.

"He ain't as handsome as Roderick, but he's worth a lot more to us," Bugs grinned. And Porky and Petunia chuckled proudly.
